WHAT IS HUMIC ACID?

AAPFCO Humic Substance Definition: Humic Substances are the major organic constituents of soil organic matter and the aquatic environment, consisting of complex heterogeneous mixtures of carbon-based substances formed by biochemical reactions during the decay and transformation of plant and microbial remains. They are primarily composed of three main fractions, called humic acids, fulvic acids, and humin, which are operationally defined by their solubility in dilute alkali and acid solutions. High concentrations of humic substances are commercially harvested from terrestrial deposits of Leonardite.

Humic Acid, consisting of mostly carbon and oxygen with a few other trace elements, is naturally produced by decaying organic matter in the soil. It is an important end product of this biological decay.

HOW DOES HUMIC ACID HELP MY CROPS?

Benefits of Humic Substances: There are numerous studies showing the positive impact of humic substances on plant growth, increased root structure, improved nutrient uptake, and potential higher yields.
